The AGE of COLUMBUS

WHILE Columbus' three little ships were plowing their way across the Atlantic to unlock the door of the mysterious New World, what sort of Old World had they left behind? On Oct. 12 CBC Wednesday Night takes a look at it with the help of one of Canada's ablest playwrights, Lister Sinclair.

The Renaissance with its exciting new vistas of man's potentialities has intrigued Sinclair for a long time, and he has spent much of the last eight months exploring it for this program, which he calls The Age of Columbus. It was a giant-sized undertaking, but not the first large-scale work Sinclair has done for CBC Wednesday Night. His others were A Day in the Life of Dr. Johnson, and The Age of Elizabeth.

The year 1492 was a marvelous one in an age of great, many-sided men with the impulse to the highest individual development. Not all of them were admirable. But they all made a lasting impression on the civilization that would soon stretch its fingers across the Atlantic in the wake of Columbus. Sinclair will bring these people and their "age of gold" alive for us in a variety of ways, with dramatizations, music, and readings from works of the time.

"People in 1492 were most enthusiastic about their own cities, and quite pleased with themselves," he says, so their writing was usually highly entertaining, and often amusing and witty. There will be glimpses of culture at the time, politics, economics, religion, family life. "In 1492 the Renaissance was in full swing in Central Italy," Sinclair says. "The further north you went the more you drifted back into the Middle Ages. By the time you had reached the Netherlands and England you were away back."

It was an exciting age because of three recent inventions that opened up unlimited mental and geographical horizons: moveable type, the mariner's compass, and the cannon. In 1492 Ferdinand and Isabella had completed the reconquest of Spain from the Moors by taking Granada on New Year's Day, and had expelled the Jews (Please turn to page 35)

NEARLY everything about CBC-TV's Open House is brand new this season. On the opening show, this Monday afternoon, viewers will be introduced to new host and hostess—Max Ferguson and Gwen Grant.

Ferguson, of course, is best known as Rawhide, whose witty satires and repertoire of over 40 voices have been popular on CBC radio for many years. For the last two years he has been an interviewer on Seven-O-One (formerly Tabloid) in Toronto and he will continue to appear on the show about once a week. He's a family man—father of five children—with a wide variety of interests, including aspects of homemaking, music, books, travel, showbusiness, and he will be talking them over with guests on the new show each week.

Gwen Grant has worked in television in Hollywood and New York, both in front of the cameras and behind the scenes, and since returning to Canada a little over a year ago has appeared as interviewer on TV news programs and on CBC radio's Trans-Canada Matinee. She has been a beauty consultant for two of the world's largest cosmetic houses, and has travelled widely. She and Ferguson will keep the show moving along on the relaxed, friendly note Open House hopes to maintain through the season.

Open House will be seen three days a week — for a half-hour on

Max Ferguson, Gwen Grant—

NEW HOST AND HOSTESS FOR NEW "OPEN HOUSE"

Mondays and Wednesdays, and for a full hour on Fridays.

The opening program features the first of six illustrated talks on home decoration, called Designs for Living. The speaker will be Margit Bennett, associate editor of the Canadian Homes magazine. Mrs. Bennett is a Dane who came to Canada 11 years ago and married a Canadian. She has contributed many stimulating ideas on interior decorating to Canadian homemakers, and has encouraged Canadian designers to explore new fields of their own. On Monday's show she will talk about and illustrate The 10 Best Decorating Ideas, and will explain how they can be adapted to fit existing schemes. Next week she will discuss floor plans and the importance of studying them carefully before buying or building a house. Later in the series she talks about furniture and accessory scale and pro-

On the Cover

THIS WEEK'S cover subjects point up two features of CBC's programming—its French-for-English-speaking-Canadians program, and its children's shows, many of which return to the air this week (see TV listings).

Montreal model Phyllis Clapperton is the glamorous assistant to Prof. Jean-Paul Vinay on Speaking French Saturday afternoons on CBC-TV. Hélène Baillargeon is the hostess on the bilingual program for pre-schoolers, Chez Hélène, Monday through Friday on CBC-TV.

Speaking French is directed at that part of the English-speaking audience who are interested in devoting some time to the study of French (printed study material is offered in conjunction with the course); Chez Hélène, on the other hand, is aimed at a very young audience to whom the understanding of a new language comes almost as naturally as the native tongue. Many parents have reported that they are astounded how much French their under-sixes have picked up from Chez Hélène.

Bilingual conversation of the type offered on Chez Hélène, but directed at an adult English-speaking audience, is presented on Time for French Saturdays on CBC radio. On Time for French Gérard Arthur and his English-speaking wife, Sheila, indulge in typical domestic conversations (and sometimes quarrels!) in their own languages. Time for French is followed by Chansonettes, French songs introduced by Jacques Desbaillets.

portion—how to buy pieces to fit in with what you have; wall coverings; window treatment; and she will end the series with imaginative but sensible suggestions for making do with what you have.

A special guest on the opening show will be Canadian TV star Robert Goulet, who plays Sir Lancelot in the new Lerner and Loewe musical Camelot, now having its pre-Broadway run in Toronto.

Madame Jehane Benoit will be back on Wednesday with more mouth-watering recipes that will probably send you running to your kitchen to try them out. Madame Benoit, says Margaret Fielder, new program organizer for Open House, will appear frequently during the season. And once a month there will be a man in the kitchen, showing how to make one of his favourite dishes. Wednesday is also news commentary day. This week Dr. Paul Fox of the department of political economy at the University of Toronto returns with a report on world affairs. He will alternate with another analyst to be announced later.

The hour-long feature this Friday will answer that question every woman asks at this time of year: What's new in fashions? Jean Miller, fashion artist and consultant, will show some of the latest trends in winter clothes, with the accent on Canadian designs, and point out what's right and wrong in accessories, hats and hair styles to go with them.

Dancer Lorraine Thompson, a former instructor at the Canadian School of Ballet, will be seen twice a month with exercises to help viewers keep in trim, and there will be twice-monthly beauty features by authorities on skin, hand and hair care.

Open House will be produced, as before, by Peggy Nairn, who was married during the summer and is now Peggy Liptrott.

Margaret Fielder tells us that future Friday "specials" will include an interview with Isabel Allen of the Sunnyside Home for Emotionally Disturbed Children in Kingston, and a film on the school; a hobby show with suggestions for interesting and unusual leisure-time activities; panel discussions on provocative topics; an interview with soprano Lois Marshall; opera talks by Ruby Mercer; an on-the-spot show from the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto; an important program about the Family and Juvenile Court, including interviews with a judge and with young boys in trouble; a program featuring ideas for Christmas presents, cooking and decorations; Christmas celebrations with New Canadians; and a look at the Maritimes. On December 30 a group of teenagers will take over the program to discuss their problems without any adults "butting in."

CORRECTION

It was erroneously stated in the Oct. 2-8 issue that the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," to be seen Nov. 14, would be part of CBC-TV's Festival '61 series. Although "Macbeth" will be seen in the same Monday night time period, it will not be part of the series.

LAURA LINDSAY

Edmonton TV personality who will be one of the guest panelists on "Live a Borrowed Life" Oct. 13 from Edmonton. The other guest will be Edmonton businessman - sportsman - jazzman Henry Singer (replacing Al Oeming, listed in last week's issue).

THIS season CBC radio's Project '61 will live up to the reputation established by the earlier Project '59 and Project '60 series for program fare that is off the beaten track, punchy, thought-provoking and entertaining.

Because of a growing concern about evidence of moral decay in our society, the staff of CBC radio's Project '61 under Harry Boyle's direction, has decided to examine this evidence in a series of programs that will run until Christmas. They plan to question a group of people who, through their jobs, exert the most influence on society: the criminal, social worker, police, clergy, artist, teacher, business man and publisher. From their answers, says program planner Frank Freedman, Project '61 hopes to be able to draw some valid conclusions.

The first two programs will serve as a backdrop to the series. The opening show (Oct. 9) takes an intimate look at The Hungry Thirties. It will not be an economic survey, but rather a personal recollection of an era by men and women who have reason to remember it well — ordinary people from coast to coast, mothers who tried to feed their families with no incomes, doctors who were hardly ever paid but kept on anyway, the unemployed, members of the Salvation Army who cared for them — as complete a panorama of that hungry era as possible.

The narrator will be Canadian novelist Morley Callaghan, who is identified strongly with the thirties. At the end of the program he will contribute his personal recollections of that period. The program will move along like a ballad, reminiscences being interspersed with sounds of riding the rails, steamboat whistles, songs of the soup kitchens, and other noises and melodies of the decade. The show has been prepared by Ron Krantz, who wrote two of last season's outstanding CBC broadcasts: The Invisible Rain, and Canada 1980.

"We feel," said Freedman, "that there are certain rough parallels between the economic picture just prior to the crash of '29 and the one today, and we hope to draw some of them on the program. For many of our younger listeners the depression is just a lesson in a school book. We want to bring it alive for them. Undoubtedly an era when there was little in the larder and little in the future left some traumatic scars on the people who survived it. Perhaps an evocation of that time will help the new generation to understand their elders and their mistakes, a little better.

The second program, on Oct. 16, deals with The Frightening Sixties from the point of view of the young North Americans leaving schools and colleges and going out into the topsy-turvy world their elders have provided for them.

Freedman referred to the current widespread protest in the United States by young people against the kind of society they have inherited. "They have nothing but contempt for the social structure they have grown up in. And they're not alone. There have been similar youth demonstrations in Japan, Turkey, Korea, and other places." John Hamilton, who prepared our show on beatniks last season, will interview four American students who refused to take loyalty oaths. Indirectly we will hear from another couple of young people who refused essay awards from the American Legion for patriotism. There will be interviews with students at the University of California at Los Angeles involved with student protests in connection with un-American activities investigations, and one with Professor Brinnon, the spiritual leader of a West Coast student movement. The narrator is to be Irving Layton of Sir George Williams University in Montreal, who sympathizes with youth's revolt against what it calls the decadence of modern society, and who will make a personal summation of the situation at the end of the show.

"The central fact which dominates the horizon of the 1960's is that it has now become technically possible to eliminate poverty and create a world of plenty by the end of this century. What is short is not the physical supply of material resources in any given country; the real question is whether the skills of a society and its capacity to organize itself for producing plenty are sufficiently advanced."—Andrew Shonfield, Economic Editor of "The Observer," on BBC.

Coming—

SIX ESSAYS BY EX-COMMUNISTS

After the first of the year Project '61 will present an important quintet of shows involving the people who contributed to a book published 10 years ago under the title of The God That Failed. It includes six essays by distinguished men of letters who once personally, emotionally and spiritually embraced Communism as man's last hope, and then became completely and bitterly disillusioned. They are Arthur Koestler, André Gide, Ignazio Siloni, Louis Fischer, Stephen Spender, and Richard Wright.

With the exception of Gide, who has died, the others, along with Richard Crossman who linked their remarks in the book will be heard on the program. Excerpts will be read from their writing when under Communist influence and from their essays in The God That Failed when they had disavowed Communism; then each will reassess the book in the light of the present. Program planner Frank Freedman calls the program "a sort of oral edition of the book, updated.

"These men have no axe to grind. But through them we hope to give the listener a picture of the true nature of Communism, seen from both inside and outside, and of what must be lacking in our society when men of such stature as these get so fed up with it that they turn to Communism."

Peter Sellers On "Close-Up"

PETER SELLERS, the British comic and character actor has been described as another Alec Guinness.

Peter Sellers

Certainly, in the past few years he has become one of Britain's best known film personalities through the English speaking world.

Yet everyone, including Sellers, agrees that off-stage he is not a particularly impressive person. Life magazine described him as "not a memorable figure. He is neither tall nor short, young nor old, handsome nor homely. . . ."

The London Sunday Times said of him: "A quiet, slightly gloomy man, descended from the family that produced Disraeli and Mendoza (the prize fighter), Sellers is the unlikeliest of funny men."

And the Toronto Star: "A quiet, introverted man who worries about maintaining his success. . . ."

Sellers himself says: "But I find that if, for example, I were to play myself (which I cannot do because

Close-Up

This week Elaine Grand interviews British satirist Peter Sellers. See story this page.

The Twilight Zone

This week—"A Stop at Willoughby." James Daly stars as an ulcer-ridden executive who escapes from the pressures of business problems by retreating to a peaceful little village in the year 1888.

CBWT—Eye To Eye

Part two of a two-part series on adoption. In this study of adoption, we will deal first with the law which stipulates that the adopted child, when Catholic or Protestant, must be brought up in the appropriate faith. The second part of the program will be a discussion of this law among four clergymen representing Anglican, United, Jewish and Catholic faiths.

I've got nothing as myself to offer) I only tick over when I've successfully hidden myself in something; if I am myself I feel like somebody getting up to open a church bazaar."

And again: "As I said once before, personality actors, such as David Niven or Cary Grant, are themselves on and off the screen. They perform, they act, they project themselves, but the character actor doesn't, you see. The character actor has nothing to put forward except some guise that he takes on."

Sellers makes these points in a conversation with Elaine Grand to be seen in this week's Close-Up, Tuesday night on CBC-TV. The Close-Up interview shows that this opinion of Sellers and others about himself is only partly true. As Close-Up producer Ross MacLean said of the interview, "Something of Sellers' humour, something of his mysticism comes through." And the result is an interesting and revealing thirty minutes.

A member of a theatrical family, Sellers was a professional drummer before the war. After service in India, he found an over-abundance of drummers in post-war Britain and turned to vaudeville where he was unhappy and unsuccessful.

One story has it that he broke into radio by phoning a BBC producer and, using the voices of the BBC personalities, Kenneth Horne and Richard Murdoch, recommended himself highly. This, perhaps, is mythical. However, Sellers does suggest that the BBC probably did not quite know what it was getting when it began The Goon Show with Sellers, Spike Milligan and Harry Secombe. It is quite impossible to describe this program to anyone who has not heard it. And we will not try. But its fans claim that The Goon Show proved once again that at its best, nonsense becomes mysticism, and the absurd becomes sublime.

Although Sellers admits playing along for laughs at the expense of the extremists who saw every Goonish flick of the eyelid as having Eternal Significance, he also says of Goonism, "It's away from

October 12, 19, 26

A VETERAN WRITER for the pulp magazines once advised tyros in the trade like this: In the first line, or as near to it as possible, swipe your hero with a fistful of grief.

Neither the idea nor the expression is particularly elegant. But both have a certain bluntness of purpose which gave the author's stories a special quality of wide appeal.

Note that two things are necessary: the hero, and his grief. This Franks as Constable Mitchell, and John Perkins as Constable Frank Scott.

Last program of the series—"Piggy Bank Robbery." Constable Frank Scott investigates a "bank robbery" and becomes involved with dynamite—in more ways than one. Cast—Gilles Pelletier as Cpl. Gagnier, John Perkins as Const. Scott, Don Franks as Const. Mitchell, Chris Wiggins as George Needham, Lynne Gorman as Vera Needham, Frank Mathias as Ray, Tony Kramreither as Victor Raskob, and Alex McKee as Wellington.

First Person

Today—"The Heroes," a TV drama by William R. Cox, based on a story by Aldous Huxley, starring Toby Robins. Recalling her youthful experience on an exciting, near-disastrous sea voyage, an old lady proves to her granddaughter that heroes sometimes have feet of clay. (As Mary, Toby Robins plays a dual role—a 70-year-old blind woman and a young girl).

Explorations

This week—"The Hero and Homicide"—Don Franks as a private eye, shows Corinne Conley some of the reasons for his popularity as together they investigate some classics of crime. They are assisted by a wide assortment of mysterious strangers, butlers, hoods and occasionally by the police.

same formula, transferred to TV, has been successful in establishing an even greater appeal. On Oct. 12 Explorations begins a three-part study of the Hero as he is known through the medium of the mass communications. All three programs have Don Franks as the Hero.

First program, called Hero on Horseback, has the Hero talking to a youngster (played by Rex Hagan) about the changes that have taken place in our concept of the western over the years.

"You see, son," he explains, "in the good old days it was easy to tell who was who in a western. The hero always wore a white hat like mine. The villain always wore a black hat like that guy."

But now, westerns have grown up into adult westerns. Which means you just cannot tell the good from the bad by their hats. The whole thing is much more subtle. You can of course, wait till the end to see who is bad. You can tell then by watching which one dies.

"Straightshooters always win; lawbreakers always lose," says the Hero. "That's the way westerns are made son, even today."

But the discerning viewer, bubbling with intellectual curiosity, can tell which is good, which bad, before the end by studying available clues. "The rich is always the villain ever'where," says the Hero. "Except in sophisticated comedies where they marry poor girls. . . . It's easier to sort out the good and the bad if you can do it by income and property holdin's."

But there is an even better way, and that's by psychoanalyzing the characters and their horses as the action moves on. The Hero has a stable childhood and healthy (if not always good) living stamped all over his psyche. But the villain turns out to have a power com-

Them. Dick shows the children a hamster he and Madeleine brought back from their summer holidays.

Music In Miniature

A half-hour of serious music produced in Toronto. The series presents well-known and less familiar short pieces for voice or instrument. Three or four younger and lesser-known recitalists will be used on each program.

Just Mary

Today — "Runaway Toys." Dame Doolittle comes to Miss Tessie's Toy Shop to buy some toys for her little granddaughter, Araminta. But everyone knows that Araminta is a spoiled brat, who breaks and ruins all her toys. Her grandmother chooses three toys, a doll (Antoinette), a bear (Sailor) and a Jack-in-the-Box. To avoid their horrible fate, the toys decide to run away and hide in the garret. The next day Miss Tessie finds them and persuades them to come back. When Dame Doolittle and Araminta come to the shop, Miss Tessie and the toys tell them what happened. Araminta is ashamed and promises that from now on she will take care of her toys.

Junior Roundup

Today—"Soap Box Derby," a J. Arthur Rank film about two opposing gangs of kids who compete in a derby.

CBWT—Father Knows Best

A domestic comedy series starring Robert Young and Jane Wyatt as Mr. and Mrs. Jim Anderson, and Elinor Donahue as their oldest child Betty.

Live a Borrowed Life

This week women's commentator Betty Kennedy and a male panelist join regulars Bill Walker and Elwy Yost. Charles Templeton is moderator.

Klondike

This week—"The Unexpected Candidate." Jeff Durain decides to hold an election and have his men voted into office so that he can control Skagway legally. Kathy and Mike immediately form an opposition party.

Fancy Free

With Allan Blye, Ruth Walker, the Billy Van Four, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, and host Alan Millar. Each program in this musical-variety series will incorporate as its theme a "Calendar Year" feature. Today's guests, the modern dance team of Carlu Carter and Bill McGrath help the regulars turn the calendar back to 1945.

plex. "My son doesn't understand me, or my father didn't," he says, and turns out to be not really bad, just a crazy kid all mixed up through sibling rivalry.

The second program (Oct. 19) substitutes the world of the Private Eye for the Old West. Black and white hats never meant too much to the Private Eye who always was pretty much of an adult. There have of course been many varieties of Private Eyes. Among the earliest were the Ratiocination Boys, epitomized by Sherlock Holmes, who like to sit around for long periods thinking, discovering the actual by eliminating the impossible.

On the other hand, there is the "bust-'em-in-the-think-tank" type of private eye who prefers actions, as violent as possible, to thought. The clue he likes best to chase down is the victim's blonde secretary, and he usually lives in California. Another type is the "little-old-lady-who-finds-the-butler-did-it" who crop up in English detective stories.

And yet another is the charming, wise-cracking ("Then I set fire to a cigarette") detective couple like Dashiell Hammett's Nick and Nora: "The face is familiar," he says, bending over the corpse, "but I can't recall the pulse."

Diverse though these different characters seem, they all have at least one thing in common: they are not police, not members of officialdom. (In fact, police usually appear as bumbling, though perhaps good-hearted, clods.) Because the hero is an outsider, the viewer can identify with him and enjoy, at one and the same time, both outwitting the law and seeing crime punished, because, actually, as a viewer, you too are a bit mixed up.

The third program in the series, The Hero at Home (Oct. 26) shows a happy, healthy normal family under Dad - the - Hero's fatherly eye and it "proves once again that Mother knows best."

Program organizer Robert McCormack summarized the series

like this: "Three Heroes lightly follows the development of electronic folklore, taken over from the skops, and skalds, bards and wandering minstrels, and tries, with some slight exaggeration, to highlight some of the special characteristics that mark the heroes of our times."

Author of the three scripts is Gerald Weales. This writer, on the staff of the English Department of the University of Pennsylvania, is the author of many articles. Two of his most recent, in The Atlantic and The Reporter, for instance, show that highly irreverent attitude which mark these programs. His novel, A Tale for the Bluebeard, is about to be published in the U.S.A.

Vincent Tovell will produce The Three Heroes.

reality, or in a strange way it's allied to reality. I mean, I remember when we were doing a broadcast about the government's efforts to rid Trafalgar Square of starlings. You looked through the Hansard reports of debates in the House of Commons and they were so hysterically funny that one had literally only to quote them. . . . Do you know what one method of getting rid of these birds was? A helicopter dangling an idiot with a anti-starling spray gun, dangling him around the ledges spraying the starlings with the stuff. . . . Of course, the whole thing is so stupid. You go down there and there's so much traffic noise you can't even hear the poor wretched birds."

More than just an actor, Sellers was responsible for producing a film which won awards at the Edinburgh and San Francisco film festivals. The 11-minute long film, called The Running, Jumping, and Standing Still Film, opens with a girl scrubbing a meadow with soap and water, goes on to show a man playing a phonograph record by placing it on a tree stump and running round it with a needle and horn, then. . . . Well?

Well!

ANOUILH'S "COLOMBE"

ON the New York stage — and this probably applies to most of the other North American stages — there seems to be a rule that young heroines, regardless of what chicanery they are up to, must be romantic and, deep, deep down, really decent souls. Jean Anouilh shocked Broadway (after he had delighted Paris) with his Colombe when he made his heroine a thorough rascal, and showed that selfish and wicked people do not always get their come-uppance — that they can, in fact, have a wonderful time being frankly bad, and that this honesty is sometimes more admirable than the smug virtue of their opponents.

In playing this little trick on the moralists and shaking the dust off a few hypocrisies, Anouilh thought he had made it perfectly clear that it was all a joke by calling his comedy Colombe. He felt sure that everyone would realize that the melancholy lover was Harlequin, mooning over Columbine as always, and getting the usual slapstick kick in the pants as his reward. Many of the audience and some of the critics, not understanding Anouilh, were up in arms, reaching for phrases like "moral degeneracy" to describe his finely-written comedy. But the more discerning hailed it as a bracing breeze, an honest and amusing look at life as it really is.

CBC-TV's Festival '61 presents this controversial play Monday night in a translation from the original French by Toronto actor-writer Ivor Barry, who will also play the role of Gaulois, a leading man in the Paris theatre at the turn of the century. Colombe will be produced by Mario Prizek.

Many Canadian and American actresses read for the title role. Prizek chose 21-year-old Kathleen Widdoes, a young American, because he felt that only she "could combine the sophistication and innocence the part demands."

This is her first appearance on CBC-TV, but she is not new to Canadian theatre goers. She made her professional debut in Canada in a production of Luther Adler's A View from the Bridge, and she appeared here again with Katherine Cornell in Christopher Fry's The Firstborn. She had gone to New York from Marshalltown, Delaware, with $50 in her purse, and was rooming in Greenwich village, hoping for a break, when she was called to Luther Adler's apartment to read for a role in A View from the Bridge. It was December, there was a blizzard raging, and she recalls that to save taxi fare she ran 12 blocks to pick up a script. Adler gave her the role and she opened Christmas night in Montreal. During the play's seven-week run there she was called to New York to read for the part of the young princess in The Firstborn, in which she made her Broadway debut. Later she repeated her role with the same cast in Tel Aviv, at the request of the Israeli Government, and returned to New York to appear in The World of Susie Wong.

"People are my business," Miss Widdoes says, "and I find them fascinating. The way they shake hands or use their hands — these things can tell you a lot. I live alone in a small flat in Greenwich Village, but I often go for walks or drop into a restaurant by myself, just to watch the people around me."

Colombe is about some unforgettable people. Essentially it is a boy-meets-girl story with an ironic twist, set at the turn of the century. Colombe is a shy and innocent flower girl married to Julien, a young man who has to leave for military service. Colombe finds herself catapulted into the sophisticated, tinsel world of the Paris theatre as the protégé of her mother-in-law, Madame Alexandra, the aging and temperamental actress of the day. Madame is also a wicked old schemer who has been

Old-fashioned ideals like the training of intellect and of character did at least imply that children were to be treated as responsible agents worthy to carry on the activities of a civilized community; they did not imply, as does the stress on mental health, that children are to be treated as patients who have to be weaned in a kindly way to nibble at the raw meat of the modern world.—R. S. Peters, Reader in Philosophy at London University on BBC.

THIS WEEK ON RADIO

IT all started—six years ago—from a “winter of discontent.” Actors are always complaining that they should have been cast in so-and-so’s part—or any part but the one they’re in—and back in 1954 I was convinced (it was a delusion, of course) that I was being cast in nothing but small parts or dull parts or parts that nobody could do anything with . . . or worse still, the kind of parts about which the author rushes up to you excitedly in the studio and says: “Got a wonderful part for you next Sunday! One of those small but extremely effective parts. Needs doing just right—and you’re the man to do it. I do hope you’re available.” So you turn up at rehearsal and find yourself with about five short speeches to be done in Southern Indonesian dialect which any one of ten actors could do with equal lack of authority.

Whatever the fact was, I believed myself at that moment to be badly treated . . . and then suddenly—a flash! “Why not write the kind of program in which I can play any part I want? Where I can play all the parts I want!” . . . And there you are: that’s how A Touch of Greasepaint was born. Of course, I had all the luck in the world. If it was to be a program about the theatre, to include scenes from various plays, I obviously couldn’t do it myself—and that’s where the luck came in. Just before my great idea, Barry Morse had decided to move to Toronto, and the moment I said to him: “How would you like to play any part you like, week after week?” I had a partner. From then on in the story, the first person singular disappears, for from that day to this, A Touch of Greasepaint has been a joint undertaking.

The preparation of our programs involves a perfect division of labour. “Let’s do a show about the original Globe Theatre, and Shakespeare as an actor,” says Barry, and away he goes to the library to find the necessary books. (If he’s busy with a television appearance, away goes his wife Sydney to the library). This is where Barry’s famous memory comes in, for I’m sure that every scene from every play that he’s ever seen or read has stayed in his mind: it saves many, many steps down among the stacks. After he’s found the books, there follows a session of hunting through them to find the references and quotations and anecdotes that make up the colour surrounding the scenes we’re going to present, and then one morning Barry staggers into the studio with a pile of books bristling with markers, and a black exercise book full of notes.

Sunday radio

“A TOUCH OF GREASEPAINT”

By ALAN KING

At that point, my work begins—at the typewriter. I arrange all the materials into a script, write the comment for both of us—and do the casting as well . . . of the male parts, that is, because we play them all. Now this could be tricky, but for five seasons our casting department has worked in perfect harmony with our actors, for Barry knows that if I appropriate Sir Giles Overreach or Sir John Brute this week, he’ll find himself playing Dr. Faustus or Henry V the week after. And when it comes to quantity—well, the week we did The Relapse we divided thirteen parts between us! For variety, we usually choose scenes which include a female character, which enables us on most programs to use a guest actress.

For most of our first five seasons our producer was Esse Ljungh. He was with us right at the beginning, and we have always been grateful to him for much wise direction and advice derived from many years of work and experience in the theatre. This season our producer is to be Murray Edwards who, as a student of the theatre and theatrical history, especially in Canada, has acquired an enormous stock of theatrical knowledge which will be invaluable to us. It’s Murray who has been the active spirit in creating the theatre exhibition which has been a feature of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival for the past three years.

So far, in five seasons, we have played close to 150 half-hour shows, in which the two of us have played something like 250 characters: we have presented excerpts from a dozen countries, covering the theatre of ten centuries. Our plans this year include some stories of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, some blood-curdling moments from Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street, scenes from The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, and the presentation of some avant-garde works by Becket, Ionesco and Beban, some of which have not yet been presented in the commercial theatre on this continent.

One word about our audience. The immediate and continuing response of listeners all over Canada has emphasized how deeply Canadians are interested in the theatre, although until recent years no one would have guessed it from the scarcity of native theatrical enterprise. And in the case of those who have come from other lands to live in Canada, theatrical memories reach back over many years. We did one program on the death of Sir Henry Irving, who collapsed and died at Bradford an hour after speaking the closing lines of Becket's Into thy hands, O Lord, into thy Hands!, and learned that one of our listeners was there in Bradford at the time. On another occasion, we found we were playing scenes from Maugham's The Land of Promise to a listener who had witnessed the play's opening night in London in 1910, while a piece about the handsome William Terriss produced a letter from a lady who had occupied his dressing-room at the Adelphi Theatre shortly after he had been stabbed to death in the corridor outside.

All in all, our listeners have made us feel that we have come about as close as possible to creating an atmosphere of the theatre on the radio—and if that is so, then our main purpose has been fulfilled.

On CBC Wednesday Night

The Marriage of Figaro

For the first time a grand opera will be broadcast in full on CBC radio direct from the Canadian Opera Company Festival in Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theatre on October 19. Mozart's four-act comic opera, The Marriage of Figaro, one of three operas being presented at the Festival, will be heard on CBC Wednesday Night. Walter Susskind will conduct. The English translation of the libretto by Lorenzo Da Ponte, based on Beaumarchais' controversial satire, is by Ruth and Thomas Martin.

There will be three intermission features. In the first James Bannerman will interview Herman Geiger-Torel, general director of the Canadian Opera Company. The CBC National News bulletin will fill the second intermission. And in the third, former opera singer and well-known radio-TV interviewer Ruby Mercer will talk to some of the principals in the cast and to English stage director Peter Ebert, who is on his first visit to Toronto.

CBC producer Carl Little, who will be in charge of the broadcast, plans to use three microphones in the main stage area—two in the wings and one on centre stage, and one or two for the orchestra, but he will make them as inconspicuous

MUSIC ON RADIO

By FRANK HAWORTH

A LIBERAL sprinkling of unfamiliar and less-familiar names garnishes our programs this week. The Symphony No. 7 of Karl Amadeus Hartmann, noted contemporary German composer, of "atonal" leanings, will be heard on Sunday evening; music for violin and piano by two English newcomers, Malcolm Lipkin and Richard Bennet, is featured on Distinguished Artists on Tuesday night, on which also Benjamin Lees' Concertante Breve will be played by the Vancouver Chamber Orchestra; the Winnipeg Chamber Orchestra offers a Divertimento by Trapp on Sunday afternoon, and the Dirk Keetbaas Players include music by Farkas and Mortensen in their Monday night Chamber Music program. Wallingford Riegger, who seems to be enjoying something of a boom just now, is represented by his Variations for Piano and Orchestra in the program of the New York Philharmonic on Saturday night (Oct. 15).

Those who dislike such manifestations of the new and unproved—and no one is obliged to like them—will have plenty of consolation: the old stalwarts, from Bach to Debussy, are well to the fore; and CBC Wednesday Night is devoted to a performance of Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, with Walter Susskind on the podium and an impressive roster of soloists on the stage. But the significant thing is that more and more people apparently do like them, or at least, feel sufficiently interested in them, or curious about them, to warrant increasing attention to them by the CBC and its performing artists. Or perhaps it is the other way about; perhaps growing popular interest results from increasing atous as possible for the sake of the theatre audience. The control room will be at the back of the top balcony in the little room where the spotlights are located. From there the announcer will have an unobstructed view of the stage.

When we interviewed Herman Geiger-Torel during a rehearsal for the Festival he told us that he looked on the Wednesday night broadcast as an important landmark in the growth of the Canadian Opera Company—a recognition of its stature in North American culture. "The CBC has played a tremendous part in building up opera tradition in this country," he said. "It has steadily given bread and butter to many operatic artists in radio and TV, and this generous attitude has been the main incentive to our company's growth. We owe a great debt to the CBC for keeping so many of our fine artists in this country, and the CBC, in turn, has made use of the talents of our company. This mutual co-operation has been climaxed in the CBC Wednesday Night broadcast. I hope it is the first of many."

We asked Mr. Torel what plans he had for the Company when it

PROGRAM NOTES

POSTMARK U.K.

Today—"The Battle of Rutland." In the heart of England there's a battle raging over the life or death of England's smallest county—Rutland—152 square miles of wooded countryside and two little towns, Oakham and Uppingham and a total population of 23,200. An official body, called the Local Government Boundaries Commission has decided that Rutland is too small a unit, and that local government economy and efficiency is better obtained by larger units and this Commission wants to partition the county between its three neighbours—Northamptonshire, Leicestershire and Lincolnshire. Colin Wills visited the county and was greeted by the inhabitants he interviewed with strong protests against this suggested partition. You hear also about the steps the Rutlanders are taking to defeat this proposition.

MATINEE HIGHLIGHTS

Married Women Working for Pay. Doris French looks into the conditions and prospects for married women working in Canada. Her survey includes discussion of a pamphlet entitled "Married Women Working For Pay" which was recently published by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labour in Ottawa. Mrs. French is the CBC's morning commentator in Ottawa. (Repeated from Trans-Canada Matinee, Sept. 6).

Arctic Sculpture. After 22 years as a missionary in the Arctic, Father Andre Steinmann is now an art dealer. His aims in dealing with Eskimo sculpture are to get the best price for the sculptors and to give the Eskimos an idea of co-operative marketing. Father Steinmann talks today with Miriam Chapin. Mrs. Chapin, the author of "Atlantic Canada" and "Contemporary Canada," was born in Vermont, and has lived in Canada since 1932. (Repeated from TCM, Sept. 19.)

Don't Grumble, Complain. Norman Panzica maintains that Canadians don't complain enough—or at least, not to the right people. Too often, he says, Canadians accept dissatisfaction with goods and services because they don't want to make a fuss. He points out that a fuss isn't necessary all that's needed is a polite letter or two. (Repeated from TCM June 26).

LIFE AND LITERATURE

"Fearful Victorians." First of four talks by John Bilsland of the Department of English, University of Alberta. Behind the facade of solidity and tranquility which the Victorian era presented to later generations, lay dark and turbulent fears and doubt. Professor Bilsland deals with some of these fears and doubts as they emerged in the life and works of prominent literary figures of the period. Today—Alfred Lord Tennyson. Tennyson's loss of his friend Arthur Hallam plunged the Victorian poet laureate into a long and painful search for his lost faith, a search which Professor Bilsland traces through the writings of Tennyson.

tention to them by serious and devoted artists.

But whichever way it is, it is a healthy sign. Without continuous enrichment from the creative mind no art can flourish, but a prerequisite for the flow of that enrichment is some measure of public interest and support. Our generation needs its own composers to express its own feelings, outlook, ideas, ideals and aspirations, just as much as any generation of the past, and they cannot fulfill their mission unless we accord them a hearing.

This may seem obvious enough, but it has not always been appreciated, and at times it has been denied. The last decade or so of the last century, and the first quarter (or more) of this, were bad periods for composers. The great waves of 18th century classicism and 19th century romanticism, so astonishingly productive of geniuses and their masterpieces, seemed to have spent themselves, temporarily at any rate, leaving the music-loving public bedazzled and bemused, looking wistfully backward, and inclined to the belief that creative activity in music had come to an end. The Masters had said all that could be said, and the rest was silence. Which being so, any attempt at serious composition was apt to be construed as an insult to the memory of the Masters, and resented accordingly. Even such newer masters as Elgar and Delius suffered a good deal from this attitude. I am not suggesting that this was the outlook of the leaders of the musical world. But it was certainly that of the musical man-

"Carnivorous Plants." The title of tonight's talk will suggest the man-devouring plants so luridly depicted in fourth rate jungle movies and comic books, but these fictions are actually much less strange than the facts, says Harold Brodie, Professor of Botany at the University of Alberta. And one of finishes its Toronto run. He said it will tour Western Canada with The Merry Wives of Windsor by Nicolai, giving 40 performances in 39 communities. Then, after a short rest, he takes it through eastern Canada, Toronto, to Newfoundland, in January, February and March, with Offenbach's Orpheus in the Underworld. After a summer recess the Company will open its Fall opera season in Toronto's new O'Keefe Centre.

Of the distinguished performers who will bring Mozart's sprightly score to life are several who have been winning critical acclaim abroad in the last few years. Irene Salemkka (Susanna), Saskatchewan-born leading lyric soprano of the Frankfurt State Opera in Germany, returned to Canada for this occasion. It is interesting to note that she got her start in a CBC talent show, and made her operatic debut with the Canadian Opera Company. Since then she has made a name for herself in opera and oratorio in France, Austria, Switzerland, Spain, the Netherlands and Britain. After her Toronto engagement she flies to Vancouver to sing in La Boheme, then goes to Weyburn, Saskatchewan, to visit her family, and after that she has engagements lined up in Barcelona, Madrid, Frankfurt, Munich and Vienna.

Swiss baritone Heinz Reyfuss is making his North American operatic debut as the Count, a role he has sung more than 50 times in

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Parisian Singer. Josephine Baker became a star in Paris at the age of 19, some 25 years ago. Since then, she has remained at the top of the entertainment world, but there's another activity for which she's almost equally well-known — adopting children of different races. During a recent visit to Montreal, Miss Baker was questioned about this aspect of her life by freelance broadcaster Marjorie Schwartz.

Widows (1st of 5). Montreal freelance broadcaster Betty Shapiro has been interviewing widows from many walks of life for a five-part series on Trans-Canada Matinee. She has found out how they have reorganized their lives, whether they are earning a living, how they spend their leisure time, and what changes and adjustments they have had to make.

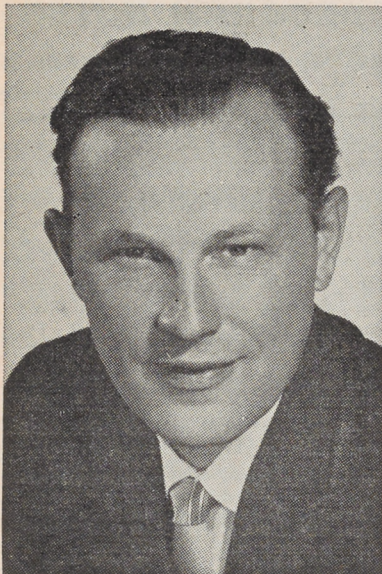

Time Forgets the Trobriand Islands. Renata Cochrane, who lives in the Territory of Papua and New Guinea, spent an unexpected holiday in Trobriand Islands. She tells Matinee listeners how for a long time afterwards she found it difficult to think of anything else.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Langevin Coté of Ottawa; recorded music selected and presented by David Ouchterlony of Toronto; another reading by Aileen Seaton from James Pope-Hennessy's "Queen Mary," adapted for radio by Doris Mosdell.

Italian, German and French, but this will be his first English performance in Figaro. Although he champions contemporary opera, Mozart's are his favourite. After the Festival he goes to Paris for recordings, then to sing Bach's St. John Passion in Monte Carlo, followed by a tour of the Rhineland, a role in Bartok's Bluebeard's Castle in Vienna, and appearances in Zurich.

German-born Phil Stark, who sings the role of Don Basilio, was a lumberjack in British Columbia before moving to Toronto a short time ago. In Europe he sang in opera in Wiesbaden, Cologne, Heidelberg, Zurich and Bordeaux. Two years ago he emigrated to Terrace, B.C., where he worked in a lumber camp and as a firefighter. Now he is delighted that the Canadian Opera Company has made it possible for him to exchange the woods for the boards he loves best.

Alan Crofoot, who has sung with the Canadian Opera Company for four seasons, spent last winter in England, where he won critics' approval for his role as Mr. Styx in the Sadlers Wells tour with Orpheus in the Underworld. Most of the other members of the Figaro cast have been active in radio, television and stage productions in Canada and the States.

"There are lots of new developments in my line of research. One, for example, in comparative chairmanship. This is the study of how different types of chairmen get their own way by different methods. One

I'll instance is confusionism. The confusionist chairman is one who allows all members to talk simultaneously on any topic for twenty-five minutes, and then at the end of it says: "Well we all seem to be agreed on item two—we'll now pass on to item three."—Professor Northcote Parkinson, of "Parkinson's Law" fame, on BBC.

tions on her, and Colombe finds she has all the gifts Madame has, and can have a whale of a time by behaving in the same way and letting the scalps fall where they may. Edouard, her husband's cynical and much-envied half-brother, becomes her friend and adviser. Julien gets wind of her activities, and returns in righteous indignation to accuse Colombe of unfaithfulness. But he finds that separation and the first giddy taste of success have changed his gentle bride.

"Anouilh gives us the core of the play in the last scene," says Prizek. "He says, in effect, that idealism of a violent sort is not reconcilable with life, and that love can only exist when we accept the bad with the good. His plays are not philosophy in play form, but observations (with humour) of life as it is."

At 49 Anouilh has had 27 years in the theatre. He can write a play in a month, but feels that "it's scandalous to think that I can earn my livelihood by amusing myself as much as I do." He has special affection for Colombe. "I like the character of the actress, an extravagant, painted old doll," he says. "I like the scene between Colombe and her husband, which brings out the tragic aspect of her unfaithfulness, following on the almost farcical dressing-room scene where it first becomes obvious that she has betrayed him. I like the surprise ending. I think the story is simple, human, universal."

In failure and success — and Anouilh has had many of both — he

"Hazardous Journey"—(grades 4-6). The purpose of this program is to illustrate by dramatization the tremendous reproductive-drive that will cause the salmon to undergo terrible hardships in order to lay its eggs, and to show some of the life habits of this interesting fish. Salmon are born in the gravel at the bottom of shallow streams and go through the alevins, parr, smolt and grisle stages before becoming adult. They migrate to the ocean where they spend their entire adult life, returning to the same stream to spawn. After spawning, the Atlantic salmon usually die, but sometimes manage to return to the ocean for another three- or four-year span before spawning again.

is an intriguing and significant figure in contemporary theatre, not just because he has mastered the play form with dazzling versatility, but also because he is a spokesman for a world at odds with itself. He jokes and jibes at the struggle in all of us between optimism and pessimism, and at our disappointment as our idols topple around us. He shows us as we are, rather than as we would like to think we are.

He divides his work into rosy, or gay, plays, and black, or tragic, plays, but in the gayest there are moments of sadness, and the most tragic have their funny sides. He has been described as an incorrigible romantic who savagely kids in-the-street whose importance was (and is) that he paid the piper and so called the tune, and the tune he called was the incessant repetition of a handful of classics with which we are still all-too-familiar.

Happily, this phase is passing away. The classics, as is right, retain their place in the scheme of things; but no longer is it considered the normal course to pour scorn on all new work, regardless of its nature or merits, or to tolerate it only on special occasions, or at private gatherings. The composer, as always since composing began, still has to fight for recognition; but at least he now has some chance of making himself heard occasionally, not merely by a coterie of specialists or personal friends, but by the public at large. Which is a positive gain, not only for the composer, but for the art itself.

AGE OF COLUMBUS

and Moors. As Columbus sailed away from Spain for the New World his ship overtook the last shipload of Jews leaving for sanctuary in Italy. The Pope at the time was Alexander VI, Rodrigo Borgia, who is generally considered rather a wicked character, but who says Sinclair, must have had a bark worse than his bite, for he offered the Jews sanctuary when no one else would take them. It was the year before his ruthless son, Caesar Borgia, was to become a Cardinal at 17, and the year his 12-year-old daughter, Lucrezia, was married for the first time. She, too, has been misrepresented, Sinclair points out, with unfounded rumors of crime and vice. Actually she was kind and pious and a bit of a bore.

In England Henry VII had just founded the Tudor dynasty and brought order out of chaos. Twenty-two-year-old King Charles VIII of France was bitterly opposing Pope Alexander, and as a result the Italian Wars would be in full swing in two years' time. Erasmus, the broad-minded Dutch Catholic humanist, was 23 and already speaking with authority. Martin Luther, German leader of the Protestant Reformation and his future enemy, was only nine. Another world-famous Catholic, Ignatius Loyola, Spanish founder of the Jesuits, was a baby, and Lorenzo the Magnificent had just died.

Twenty-three-year-old Machiavelli, Italian author and statesman, had begun to play a leading role in the Florentine Republic, where Savonarola, a mature 40, was attacking moral laxity with a burning eloquence which helped him become virtual ruler of the city two years later, when the Medici were exiled. The ruler of Milan, Ludovico Sforza, had just hired a new town engineer, a genius of 40 called Leonardo da Vinci. During this period da Vinci painted his famous fresco, The Last Supper. Michelangelo was 17, Raphael a lad of nine, and Botticelli, one of the great figures in the world of art, was in his prime at 48. The world was soon to salute Copernicus, a 19-year-old astronomer who founded the system on which modern astronomy is based.

And, says Sinclair, there were a couple of men of the Renaissance, lesser known today, who were considered among the greatest of their time by the thinkers of the day. One he will point out to us is Pico della Mirandola, who died young. In 1942 he was 29 and renowned for his youthful brilliance and learning. His speech on the dignity of man is one of the noblest bequests of the age. He says that God made man at the close of the Creation, to know the laws of the universe, to love its beauty, to admire its greatness. He bound him to no fixed place, to no prescribed form of work, and by no iron necessity, but gave him freedom to will and to move.

"I have set thee," says the Creator to Adam, "in the midst of the world, that thou mayst the more easily behold and see all that is therein. I created thee a being neither heavenly nor earthly, neither mortal nor immortal only, that thou mightest be free to shape and overcome thyself. Thou mayest sink into a beast, and be born anew to the divine likeness. The brutes bring from their mother's body what they will carry with them as long as they live; the higher spirits are from the beginning, or soon after, what they will be forever. To thee alone is given a growth and a development depending on thine own free will. Thou bearest in thee the germs of a universal life." The old, logical notion of man had become a fact.

Among the great musicians in 1492 to be heard from are Josquin de Pres, and Heinrich Isaac, a prolific composer who was just finishing a stint in the services of Lorenzo de Medici as organist, choir-master, and teacher to his children.

As for Columbus himself—Sinclair feels that he is greatly misrepresented in the schoolbooks. To begin with, he knew the earth was round when he set out on his famous journey—all intelligent people—of the time were aware of that—but most of them had a better estimate of the size of the world than Columbus. If he had realized how far the journey was, probably he would never have undertaken it.

"Columbus is a much more complicated, more subtle and interesting character than is generally known," Sinclair tells us. "He was a religious fanatic and a hypocrite. You probably remember the story of how he swindled one of his sailors just as his ships hove in sight of America. The sailor claimed to have spied land first, but Columbus took the honour upon himself. This poor fellow was so disgusted with Columbus' Christian hypocrisy that he went off and became a Mohammedan. The big thing that delayed the departure of the 1492 expedition was Columbus' determination to get the title conferred on him of Admiral of the Ocean Sea. This did not mean that he was head of the Spanish Navy, but it did entitle him to a cut on trade in the land he hoped to discover. His big trouble was that he had a one-track mind. And he was too full of grudges to be likeable."

Sinclair tells us that when Columbus set out for the West he had considerable knowledge of the land on the other side which he had obtained from an unknown Portuguese pilot, but how detailed it was is open to question. As Sinclair has pointed out, Columbus was a monomaniac. When he had

• Front Page Challenge returns to the air following the same old infuriating pattern—a panel of four consisting of a mutual admiration society. Who cares about their books, their plays, their newspaper columns, or how they spent the summer? Someone should inform Fred Davis that the five or six minutes devoted to this backscratching could better be given over to the guests; those really interesting people whose stories are usu-arrived at the other side, he consistently misrepresented what he had found. The rest of the crew had other ideas, and they were nearly always right. When they sailed around Cuba Columbus decided, and nothing could shake him, that it was the Continent of the New World. When he hit the mouth of the Orinoco he insisted the land was an island, even when his sailors pointed out that no island could feed so large a river. Columbus emerges from Sinclair's script as quite a different figure from the schoolbook picture, but he is all the more human and intriguing because of his faults. And behind his great accomplishment Sinclair paints a broad canvas of Renaissance life that puts the discovery of our continent in fresh perspective.

ally cut off abruptly due to the run-out of time.—H. S. M., Kemp, Prince Albert, Sask.

La Boheme

• I see in the latest CBC Times, much to my disappointment, that only CBWFT is going to be carrying La Boheme on October 6. It seems that only the French stations can produce programs of a cultural nature. Can't you change this?—R. V. M., Saskatoon.

The English network will also carry two operas this season—Strauss' "Elektra" and Verdi's "Falstaff." (See Festival '61 story in Oct. 9-15 issue.)

Movie Fan

• I would like to raise my voice in protest against Great Movies being replaced by football every Saturday night. We always looked forward to watching the Saturday night movie in the comfort of our own living room. We even made our own popcorn.—Mrs. G. B., Fiske, Sask.

Too Late

• I was very disappointed yesterday evening when Sunday Choral did not come on till 10:30 p.m. I feel sure many other elderly people are going to miss it. I always had my hymn book ready for when it started. (In the winter when it comes from Winnipeg the numbers of the hymns are in the CBC Times, which I thought very nice). I also used to listen to E. V. Young of Vancouver on Vesper and Eventide. One of those programs was put off altogether, and the other is too late for me. I wonder why we older people cannot have those programs which we enjoyed so much. I also enjoy Postmark U.K. I wrote them once about a program by Sam Pollock I had enjoyed, and that Christmas I had a nice card of Westminster Abbey, with the pigeons all around it. He can certainly make one want to see dear old London again, and I have been out here 50 years.—Mrs. A. L., Glaslyn, Sask.

Case for the Court

• It is with great regret that we hear that one of the more sensible programs presented to us lately is to be terminated. I refer, of course, to the Case for the Court series. It is a great pity that something so worthwhile be pushed aside to make way for some American-made slop.—D. F. S., Winnipeg.

Actually, "A Case for the Court" will be replaced by CBC's "Explorations" series.

• I would like to suggest that the program A Case for the Court be retained. It is not only entertaining but informative as well — a quality lacking in most programs. Why is it that the weak, moronic programs are continued, but anything worthwhile is dropped? Please let us develop our Canadian programs and drop the "gunslingers" from across the border. Do make an effort to have this program continued.—Miss R. H., Winnipeg.

"A Case for the Court" was so well received that a new series is being planned for presentation on CBC-TV next summer.

Battle of Britain

• I would like to commend CBC for the wonderful TV production on the twentieth anniversary of the Battle of Britain. It is well for us in these hectic days to look back with gratitude to our valiant men—and women—of that time, and never forget the sacrifices they made for us. I was nursing in London during World War II and well remember the air raids. May they never be repeated! Also, thanks for The Beckoning Hill on Encore last Sunday—a masterpiece of acting, a truly human story, and good entertainment for young and old.—Mrs. J. D. C., Tomkins Sask.

Family Worship

• May I add my plea to many I am sure you must have received? Please do continue Family Worship just exactly as it is now—the time of day as well as the speaker. I do not know his name, but every day in our home we listen, and we never fail to find real food for thought, inspiration, or comfort. We wish him well in his new work, and happiness for himself and his family. Surely, wherever that new home is to be the CBC could carry on these broadcasts. We'll be listening—and watching the CBC Times for reassurance.—Mrs. A. C. J., Calgary.

"Family Worship" will go on as before.
